FOREWORD

Factual information on labour organizations falls within the wide range of data that help to form perspective on the nation's social and economic development. To provide a concise reference source on the union movement, the Department of Labour has published since 1911 an annual handbook dealing with the structure, size and leadership of labour organizations active in Canada.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1959 is the forty-eighth edition in the annual series. Following the pattern established over the years, the 1959 edition contains a brief commentary, the latest statistical data on union membership, and a directory of labour organizations with names of their principal officers, publications, and the geographic distribution of their local branches in Canada.

The entries in the directory, formerly grouped together according to congress affiliation, are arranged in this edition in three parts. Part I bears the heading International, National, and Regional Unions and contains a listing of all organizations affiliated with a central labour congress (other than directly chartered locals), and unaffiliated organizations consisting of at least two locals or similar units. With some exceptions, the unions included in this part are listed in alphabetical order of their short titles consisting of a key word or words in the full official title of the union, as, for instance, STEELWORKERS in the United Steelworkers of America, or PRINTING PRESSMEN in International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. To facilitate reference in instances where different unions operate in the same broad field, the following general titles are used: Airline Employees, Civil Servants, Clothing Workers, Electrical Workers, Fish Handlers, Fishermen, Longshoremens, Municipal Employees, Railway Employees, Telephone Employees, and Textile Workers. These general titles appear in alphabetical sequence with the short titles mentioned above. Unions that are listed under any of the general titles are further identified by a specific short title which follows the general title, as, for instance, CLOTHING WORKERS-AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS. In an index at the back of this volume, all unions included in Part I are listed according to the alphabetical order of their full official titles, with page references to the corresponding directory entries.

Labour organizations that consist of a single unit not affiliated with any other labour organization are listed as Independent Local Organizations in Part II of the directory by province and locality. Part III contains information on central labour congresses, their secondary bodies, and directly chartered local unions.

The listings in the directory include all organizations in Canada affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress, the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour, or the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Unaffiliated organizations are included if a substantial proportion of their membership is in occupations which fall within the scope of the appropriate labour relations legislation, provided that such organizations are party to agreements with two or more employers, or, where they have an agreement with a single employer, the organization is certified as a bargaining agent under the appropriate labour relations act. The coverage of the directory, however, does not extend to independent local organizations having fewer than 50 members. Organizations of policemen, teachers, graduate nurses, and professional engineers are also outside its scope unless they are affiliated with a central labour congress.

No official recognition is implied by the listing of any organization in the directory. The standards for inclusion have been established solely in the interest of consistent statistical practice.

The information presented in this issue has been obtained from survey returns completed in the first months of 1959 by national or international union headquarters, central labour congresses, and independent local organizations active in Canada. Data on the industrial and geographic distribution of union membership, obtained from another survey directed to union locals across the country, will appear at a later date in The Labour Gazette.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1959 was prepared by the Collective Bargaining Section of the Economics and Research Branch, Department of Labour. Much of the credit for its production must be given to the union officers who supplied the required information. To them we express our appreciation.

LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA 1959

Returns to the 1959 survey of labour unions in Canada indicated little change in the extent or pattern of union organization within the labour force from the previous year. Two central bodies – the Canadian Labour Congress, over a million strong since its formation in 1956, and the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour – continued to represent between them some 85 per cent of organized labour, while most of the balance of union membership remained distributed among organizations active on a regional, national or international level, but independent of a central labour congress. At the beginning of 1959 the total membership of all reporting organizations was close to 1,459,000.

Organizations new to the Canadian labour scene since the previous survey included the United Stone and Allied Products Workers of America, and the Canadian Guards Association. The Stone Workers' union had withdrawn from Canada in 1956 following the dissolution of its last remaining local in Nova Scotia, but returned in 1958 when a new local was formed in Saskatchewan. The Guards Association, consisting of five locals, was organized in 1958 to represent plant guards in the Toronto area.

Offsetting these additions were changes involving termination of activity or membership transfers on the part of several organizations. After more than half a century of activity in Canada, the Granite Cutters' International Association of America reported that its last Canadian local had ceased operations. Also no longer active was a more recent arrival on the labour scene, the Insurance Agents' International Union. Among other changes, the Canadian Navigators' and Engineers' Federation became part of District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America, while the remaining membership of One Big Union, an independent organization in the western provinces since 1919, became absorbed by affiliates of the Canadian Labour Congress in accordance with an agreement reached at the 1956 merger convention of the TLC and CCL. Changes in union representation occurred also in logging in Newfoundland, but these could not be readily assessed amid the unsettled situation prevailing during the survey period at the beginning of the year. It appeared, however, that neither the Newfoundland Lumbermen's Association nor the Newfoundland Labourers' Union was in operation by the end of 1958. The Fishermen's Protective Union, another Newfoundland organization, reported that it had affiliated with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and thus no longer existed as a separate entity.

More than 80 per cent of the 6,763 union locals reported in 1959 were within the Canadian Labour Congress. At the beginning of the year, the total membership of the Congress stood at approximately 1,154,000, which represented an increase of close to 10,000 over the corresponding figure in the previous year. This gain was due in part to the addition of new affiliates, as well as the growth in membership reported by a number of unions. Partially offsetting membership gains over the year were losses due to the withdrawal from Canadian operations of the Granite Cutters' Association and the Insurance Agents' Union, and membership decreases reported by some of the CLC affiliates.

Within the Canadian Labour Congress, the proportion of membership in affiliates that also belong to the AFL-CIO dropped by about two percentage points to some 78 per cent of the total. Among the unions that contributed to this shift were the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America and the Amalgamated Lithographers of America, both of which ceased to be affiliated with the AFL-CIO but remained in the CLC. On the other hand, the International Association of Siderographers, an AFL-CIO union, joined the CLC as well, and the Airlines Flight Attendants' Association, which had formerly been an independent union, became a CLC affiliate.

At the beginning of 1959 there were 459 locals in the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour, an increase of 10 over the number recorded in 1958. The total membership of the CCCL amounting to over 97,000 was, however, some 7,000 short of the 1958 figure, even though membership gains ranging from 50 to 1,000 workers were reported by such affiliates as the Federation of Building Workers of Canada, the National Federation of Leather and Shoe Workers of Canada, and the National Catholic Federation of Services.

The number of Canadian workers belonging to unions affiliated solely with the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations remained much the same as in 1958, at over 18,000. This total when added to the 897,000 members of organizations affiliated with both the AFL-CIO and the CLC, brought to 916,000 the Canadian representation in the American congress.

Among labour organizations in Canada not belonging to any central congress, unaffiliated international unions continued to be the largest group. The total membership of the eight unions in this group was approximately 80,000 at the beginning of 1959, down nearly 10,000 from the total recorded a year earlier. Although some unions in this group had modest membership gains, these were more than offset by the decreases reported by coal mining districts of the United Mine Workers of America and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, which between them accounted for the bulk of the over-all loss.

Unaffiliated national or regional unions and independent local organizations — the other two groups not linked with any central congress — reported membership amounting to approximately 74,000 and 35,000, respectively. Although the coverage of the latter group was substantially enlarged with the addition of many independent local organizations to the 1959 survey, it remained somewhat less comprehensive than the coverage of organizations that are broader in scope.

As in previous years, more than two-thirds of the organized labour force in Canada belonged to unions that operate on the international level. As of January 1959, 90 of the 110 international unions active in Canada were affiliates of the Canadian Labour Congress, and 84 of these were within the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations as well. Twelve of the remaining 20 international unions had no congress link in Canada, but were affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

National and regional unions in Canada at the beginning of the year totalled 51, with the number of CLC affiliates remaining at 20 and those of the CCCL at 13.

Taken together, international, national and regional unions had membership of more than 1,381,000, distributed among 161 organizations ranging in size from eight members to the 80,000 strong United Steelworkers of America. Despite a reported membership loss, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America has retained its position as the second largest union in Canada with nearly 70,000 members, and was followed by the 60,000 strong International Union, United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America. The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers was the largest national union in Canada in 1958, but in 1959 was surpassed by the National Union of Public Employees, which reported an increase of over 7,500 members bringing its strength to nearly 43,000.

At the beginning of the year there were 11 unions in Canada with a membership of 30,000 or more, as compared to 10 in the previous year. This size group, consisting of nine international and two national unions, included for the first time in 1959 the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers whose 1,600 new members brought the total membership of this union past the 30,000 mark.

The grand total of 1,459,000 members reported by the labour organizations covered in the 1959 survey was equal to approximately 33 per cent of the estimated total number of non-agricultural paid workers in Canada.

GLOSSARY

Local — The basic unit of labour organization formed in a particular plant or locality. The members participate directly in the affairs of their local including the election of officers, financial and other business matters, relations between their organization and employers, and they pay dues to the local. There are locals of international, national or regional unions, locals directly chartered by a central congress, and independent local organizations. Sometimes unions have units, similar to locals, such as lodges, branches or divisions.

Local of an International or National Union — A local which is organized by, or elects to affiliate itself with an international or national union. Per capita dues are paid to the parent union and in return certain services are rendered by the union.

Directly Chartered Local — A local which is organized by, and receives its charter from a central labour congress and is not part of an international or national union. It pays per capita dues directly to the congress and receives services from the congress.

Independent Local Organization — A local organization which is not formally connected or affiliated with any other labour organization.

Union — The unit of labour organization which organizes and charters locals in the industries or trades as defined in its constitution, sets general policy for its locals, assists them in the conduct of their affairs, and is the medium for co-ordinating their activities. Funds are obtained from the locals through per capita dues. Unions usually hold regular conventions of delegates from the locals at which general policy is set and at which officers are elected.

International Union — A union which charters locals in the United States and Canada.

National Union — A union which charters locals in Canada only.

Affiliated Union — A union which is affiliated with a central labour congress.

District Council — An organization of locals of a union in a particular area formed to co-ordinate the activities of the locals in the district. District councils may hold meetings of delegates from member locals to deal with matters of interest to them and at which officers for the district are elected. District organizations are also known by such names as joint boards or conference boards.

Allied Trades Federation — An organization of unions or locals of unions in a particular area, functioning in the same industry, to co-ordinate the activities of the members and to deal with jurisdictional questions. Policies are established and officers are elected at meetings attended by delegates from member organizations. Trades federations may be known by other names such as union councils, union federations, joint councils, and they are most frequently found in industries organized along craft lines.

Central Labour Congress — An organization having in affiliation various unions, directly chartered locals, provincial federations of labour, and local labour councils, for the purpose of broadly co-ordinating their activities at the national level including the relations between unions and governments and establishing relations with organized workers internationally. Congresses hold annual or biennial conventions attended by delegates from affiliated organizations at which policies are established and officers elected. The congress also organizes local unions known as directly chartered locals. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on all affiliates.

Provincial Federation — An organization formed by a labour congress at the provincial level which consists of the congress affiliates in the province. It functions similarly to the congress in the appropriate provincial area except that it does not charter local unions. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

Local Labour Council — An organization formed by a labour congress at the city level. It is organized and functions in the same manner as a provincial federation but within the scope of a city. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

CONGRESSES

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

The Canadian Labour Congress was formed in May 1956 by the merger of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labour.

At the beginning of 1959, the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 90 international unions, 20 national and regional unions and 288 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 1,153,756 in a total of 5,605 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 9 provincial federations and 97 local labour councils.

Conventions of the CLC are held in the spring of every second year. The most recent convention was in Winnipeg in 1958.

Headquarters of the Congress are located at 100 Argyle Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS

Since 1949, when the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) was established, the labour movement has been organized on a world-wide scale into three central bodies which, in addition to the ICFTU, include the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (IFCTU) and the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU). The IFCTU, of which the CCCL is the Canadian affiliate, was founded at The Hague in 1920 by representatives of Catholic and Protestant federations mostly from European countries. The World Federation of Trade Unions, founded in 1945, was confronted four years later with irreconcilable ideological differences which resulted in the withdrawal of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Canadian Congress of Labour, the British Trades Union Congress and many other national trade union organizations, and left the WFTU with membership reduced mainly to the USSR and Soviet bloc countries. In December 1949 labour representatives from 53 countries, including Canadian delegates from both the TLC and CCL, assembled in London, England to establish the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Canadian affiliation, which began with the founding convention, has been retained by the CLC since the 1956 merger of the TLC and CCL.

International Confederation of Free Trade Unions

In 1959 the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was composed of 131 affiliates in 96 countries and territories in North, Central and South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia. The total membership was approximately 55,000,000. The headquarters of the ICFTU are located at 24 rue du Lombard, Brussels, Belgium.

President Arne Geijer (Sweden)

General Secretary J. H. Oldenbroek (Holland)

Canadian Members of

Executive Board Claude Jodoin (Substitutes: W. Mahoney, G. Schollie)
Donald MacDonald (Substitutes: S. Knowles, J. Morris)

Associated International Trade Secretariats

The International Trade Secretariats (ITS) listed below are independent federations composed of national unions from different countries throughout the world, with each secretariat organized according to specific or related trades or industries. Completely autonomous bodies, the ITS act independently on questions concerning their specialized interests. However, they usually adopt the general policies of the ICFTU, and are closely associated with it.

FOREWORD

Factual information on labour organizations falls within the wide range of data that help to form perspective on the nation's social and economic development. To provide a concise reference source on the union movement, the Department of Labour has published since 1911 an annual handbook dealing with the structure, size and leadership of labour organizations active in Canada.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1960 is the forty-ninth edition in the annual series. Following the pattern established over the years, the 1960 edition contains a brief commentary, the latest statistical data on union membership, and a directory of labour organizations with names of their principal officers and publications, and the geographic distribution of their local branches in Canada.

The entries in the directory are arranged in three parts. Part I bears the heading International, National, and Regional Unions and contains a listing of all organizations affiliated with a central labour congress (other than directly chartered locals), and unaffiliated organizations consisting of at least two locals or similar units. (With some exceptions, the unions included in this part are listed in alphabetical order of their short titles consisting of a key word or words in the full official title of the union, as, for instance, STEELWORKERS in the United Steelworkers of America, or PRINTING PRESSMEN in International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. To facilitate reference in instances where different unions operate in the same broad field, the following general titles are used: Air Line Employees, Civil Servants, Clothing Workers, Electrical Workers, Fish Handlers, Fishermen, Longshoremens, Railway Employees, Telephone Employees, and Textile Workers. These general titles appear in alphabetical sequence with the short titles mentioned above. Unions that are listed under any of the general titles are further identified by a specific short title which follows the general title, as, for instance, CLOTHING WORKERS-AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS. In an index at the back of this volume, all unions included in Part I are listed according to the alphabetical order of their full official titles, with page references to the corresponding directory entries.

Labour organizations that consist of a single unit not affiliated with any other labour organization are listed as Independent Local Organizations in Part II of the directory by province and locality. Part III contains information on central labour congresses, their secondary bodies, and directly chartered local unions.

The listings in the directory include all organizations in Canada affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress, the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour, or the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Unaffiliated organizations are included if a substantial proportion of their membership is in occupations which fall within the scope of the appropriate labour relations legislation, provided that such organizations are party to agreements with two or more employers, or, where they have an agreement with a single employer, the organization is certified as a bargaining agent under the appropriate labour relations act. The coverage of the directory, however, does not extend to independent local organizations having fewer than 50 members. Organizations of policemen, teachers, graduate nurses, and professional engineers are also outside its scope unless they are affiliated with a central labour congress.

No official recognition is implied by the listing of any organization in the directory. The standards for inclusion have been established solely in the interest of consistent statistical practice.

The information presented in this issue has been obtained from survey returns completed in the first months of 1960 by national or international union headquarters, central labour congresses, and independent local organizations active in Canada. Data on the industrial and geographic distribution of union membership, obtained from another survey directed to union locals across the country, will appear at a later date in The Labour Gazette.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1960 was prepared by the Collective Bargaining Section of the Economics and Research Branch, Department of Labour. Much of the credit for its production must be given to the union officers who supplied the required information. To them we express our appreciation.

LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA 1960

At the beginning of 1960 the overall scope of union organization within the Canadian labour force showed little change from January of the previous year. Affiliates of two central bodies — the Canadian Labour Congress, over a million strong since its formation in 1956, and the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour — continued to account between them for well over 80 per cent of organized labour, while much of the balance of union membership was represented by organizations active on a regional, national or international level, but independent of a central labour congress. The total membership reported by labour organizations in Canada at the beginning of 1960 amounted to approximately 1,459,000.

The 1960 membership total no longer takes account of some 16,000 government employees belonging to three organizations that were included in earlier years because of their central congress affiliation.* In the fall of 1959, members of the 6,500-strong National Unemployment Insurance Commission Association, a Trades and Labor Congress of Canada affiliate before the TLC-CCL merger, voted in a referendum to withdraw from the Canadian Labour Congress on the grounds that continued affiliation of employees coming under the federal Civil Service Act might not be consistent with the action taken by the Congress toward the creation of a new political party. CLC sponsorship of political action was also at issue in the withdrawal of the 8,500-member Civil Service Association of Alberta, which prior to the formation of the CLC held TLC affiliation dating back to pre-war years. The 1,200-member Newfoundland Government Employees' Association, another TLC affiliate before the merger, was also no longer in the Canadian Labour Congress by the end of 1959.

Among other changes worthy of note, the International Brotherhood of Longshoremen (AFL-CIO), with approximately 400 members in five Canadian locals, merged during October 1959 with the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC), whose 27 locals in Canada last year had more than 6,000 members in total. Shortly after the merger, the International Longshoremen's Association, without a congress link in the United States since 1953, affiliated with the AFL-CIO. A change in the pattern of union representation also occurred when the 500-member Manitoba Federation of Telephone Workers, a formerly independent organization, aligned itself with the Communications Workers of America, an international union with over 3,000 members in Canada. In Newfoundland a new independent organization, the Newfoundland Brotherhood of Woods Workers, came into existence during 1959 after a prolonged logging strike and passage of legislation revoking the bargaining rights of two locals of the International Woodworkers of America.

*For description of coverage see Foreword, pp. V-VI.

More than 80 per cent of the 6,805 union locals reported in 1960 were within the Canadian Labour Congress. At the beginning of the year, the total membership of the Congress was close to 1,123,000, some 31,000 down from the total recorded a year earlier. Apart from the withdrawal of the three organizations of government employees, the lower membership figure reflects the suspension in June 1959 of the Seafarers' International Union of North America for raiding the National Association of Marine Engineers, another CLC affiliate. Ten months later a report recommending the expulsion of the Seafarers from the Congress was approved by the 1960 CLC convention after the Seafarers had failed to take the opportunity to state their case before the assembled delegates. Although during 1959 many CLC affiliates, led by the National Union of Public Service Employees, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the Labourers, and the Retail Clerks, showed membership gains, these were largely offset by decreases reported by the Machinists, Boilermakers, Woodworkers, and a number of other affiliated unions.

Within the Canadian Labour Congress, organizations belonging also to the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations in the United States continued to make up the bulk of the CLC membership strength. At the beginning of 1960 international unions linked with the CLC as well as the AFL-CIO accounted for approximately 79 per cent of the 1,123,000 members reported by all CLC affiliates.

The Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour, whose membership a year earlier was some 3,000 short of the 100,000 mark, had close to 102,000 in its ranks at the beginning of 1960. While two CCCL federations indicated lower membership totals, most other affiliates showed increases, the largest of which, exceeding 1,000 members, were recorded by the National Catholic Federation of Services, the Federation of Building Workers of Canada, and the National Metal Trades Federation.

The number of Canadian workers belonging to unions affiliated only with the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations increased to 33,000, with close to half of this total accounted for by the Seafarers, who no longer held congress affiliation in Canada.

Among labour organizations in Canada not belonging to any central congress in Canada or the United States, unaffiliated international unions continued to be the largest group. The total membership of this group, at 76,000, was however more than 4,000 short of the 1959 figure, reflecting losses shown by the United Mine Workers of America, the United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America, and the International Union of Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers.

Unaffiliated national or regional unions and independent local organizations — the two other groups not linked with any central congress — reported membership amounting to 72,000 and 53,000, respectively, with the latter total being some 18,000 above the corresponding 1959 figure. The formation of the independent Newfoundland Brotherhood of Woods Workers accounted for the major portion of this increase, while the balance of it stemmed mostly from the inclusion of several organizations that had not been previously covered by the survey.

Of the 1,459,000 organized workers reported in the 1960 survey, more than two thirds belonged to unions active on the international level. As of January, 90 of the 108 international unions in Canada were affiliates of the Canadian Labour Congress, and 85 of these were within the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations as well. Eleven of the remaining 18 international unions had no congress link in Canada, but were affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

National and regional unions operating in Canada at the beginning of the year totalled 48, with 17 unions in this group holding CLC affiliation and 13 belonging to the CCCL.

Taken together, international, national, and regional unions had more than 1,372,000 members within their ranks in a total of 156 organizations ranging in size from under ten to 82,000 members. The United Steelworkers of America continued to rank first among unions in Canada, while the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, with 66,000 members, remained in second place, followed by the 61,000-strong International Union, United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Implement Workers of America. The National Union of Public Employees, which in the previous year had moved ahead of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers as the largest national union in Canada, reported a further membership gain, bringing its total to nearly 45,000.

In 1960, as in previous years, a substantial proportion of Canada's organized labour was concentrated in a few large unions. The ten largest organizations, with nearly half a million members among them, accounted for 1 out of every 3 workers in union ranks. In addition to the Steelworkers, Carpenters, Auto Workers, Public Employees, and Railway, Transport and General Workers already mentioned, the ten largest unions included the International Association of Machinists, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the International Woodworkers of America, and the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

The grand total of 1,459,000 members reported by labour organizations in the 1960 survey was equal to approximately 32 per cent of the estimated total number of non-agricultural paid workers in Canada.

GLOSSARY

Local — The basic unit of labour organization formed in a particular plant or locality. The members participate directly in the affairs of their local including the election of officers, financial and other business matters, relations between their organization and employers, and they pay dues to the local. There are locals of international, national or regional unions, locals directly chartered by a central congress, and independent local organizations. Sometimes unions have units, similar to locals, such as lodges, branches or divisions.

Local of an International or National Union — A local which is organized by, or elects to affiliate itself with an international or national union. Per capita dues are paid to the parent union and in return certain services are rendered by the union.

Directly Chartered Local — A local which is organized by, and receives its charter from a central labour congress and is not part of an international or national union. It pays per capita dues directly to the congress and receives services from the congress.

Independent Local Organization — A local organization which is not formally connected or affiliated with any other labour organization.

Union — The unit of labour organization which organizes and charters locals in the industries or trades as defined in its constitution, sets general policy for its locals, assists them in the conduct of their affairs, and is the medium for co-ordinating their activities. Funds are obtained from the locals through per capita dues. Unions usually hold regular conventions of delegates from the locals at which general policy is set and at which officers are elected.

International Union — A union which charters locals in the United States and Canada.

National Union — A union which charters locals in Canada only.

Affiliated Union — A union which is affiliated with a central labour congress.

District Council — An organization of locals of a union in a particular area formed to co-ordinate the activities of the locals in the district. District councils may hold meetings of delegates from member locals to deal with matters of interest to them and at which officers for the district are elected. District organizations are also known by such names as joint boards or conference boards.

Allied Trades Federation — An organization of unions or locals of unions in a particular area, functioning in the same industry, to co-ordinate the activities of the members and to deal with jurisdictional questions. Policies are established and officers are elected at meetings attended by delegates from member organizations. Trades federations may be known by other names such as union councils, union federations, joint councils, and they are most frequently found in industries organized along craft lines.

Central Labour Congress — An organization having in affiliation various unions, directly chartered locals, provincial federations of labour, and local labour councils, for the purpose of broadly co-ordinating their activities at the national level including the relations between unions and governments and establishing relations with organized workers internationally. Congresses hold annual or biennial conventions attended by delegates from affiliated organizations at which policies are established and officers elected. The congress also organizes local unions known as directly chartered locals. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on all affiliates.

Provincial Federation — An organization formed by a labour congress at the provincial level which consists of the congress affiliates in the province. It functions similarly to the congress in the appropriate provincial area except that it does not charter local unions. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

Local Labour Council — An organization formed by a labour congress at the city level. It is organized and functions in the same manner as a provincial federation but within the scope of a city. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

PART III

CONGRESSES

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

The Canadian Labour Congress was formed in May 1956 by the merger of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labour.

At the beginning of 1960, the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 90 international unions, 17 national and regional unions and 234 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 1,122,831 in a total of 5,606 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 9 provincial federations and 100 local labour councils.

Conventions of the CLC are held in the spring of every second year. The most recent convention was in Montreal in 1960.

Headquarters of the Congress are located at 100 Argyle Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS

Since 1949, when the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) was established, the labour movement has been organized on a world-wide scale into three central bodies which, in addition to the ICFTU, include the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (IFCTU) and the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU). The IFCTU, of which the CCCL is the Canadian affiliate, was founded at The Hague in 1920 by representatives of Catholic and Protestant federations mostly from European countries. The World Federation of Trade Unions, founded in 1945, was confronted four years later with irreconcilable ideological differences which resulted in the withdrawal of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Canadian Congress of Labour, the British Trades Union Congress and many other national trade union organizations, and left the WFTU with membership reduced mainly to the USSR and Soviet bloc countries. In December 1949 labour representatives from 53 countries, including Canadian delegates from both the TLC and CCL, assembled in London, England to establish the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Canadian affiliation, which began with the founding convention, has been retained by the CLC since the 1956 merger of the TLC and CCL.

International Confederation of Free Trade Unions

In June 1960 the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was composed of 132 affiliates in 100 countries and territories in North, Central and South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia. The total membership was approximately 57,000,000. The headquarters of the ICFTU are located at 24 rue du Lombard, Brussels, Belgium.

International Trade Secretariats

The International Trade Secretariats (ITS) listed below are independent federations composed of national unions from different countries throughout the world, with each secretariat organized according to specific or related trades or industries. Completely autonomous bodies, the ITS act independently on questions concerning their specialized interests. However, they usually adopt the general policies of the ICFTU, and are closely associated with it.

FOREWORD

Factual information on labour organizations falls within the wide range of data that help to form perspective on the nation's social and economic development. To provide a concise reference source on the union movement, the Department of Labour has published since 1911 an annual handbook dealing with the structure, size and leadership of labour organizations active in Canada.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1961 is the fiftieth edition in the annual series. Following the pattern established over the years, the 1961 edition contains a brief commentary, the latest statistical data on union membership, and a directory of labour organizations with names of their principal officers and publications, and the geographic distribution of their local branches in Canada.

The entries in the directory are arranged in three parts. Part I bears the heading International, National, and Regional Unions and contains a listing of all organizations affiliated with a central labour congress (other than directly chartered locals), and unaffiliated organizations consisting of at least two locals or similar units. With some exceptions, the unions included in this part are listed in alphabetical order of their short titles consisting of a key word or words in the full official title of the union, as, for instance, STEELWORKERS in the United Steelworkers of America, or PRINTING PRESSMEN in International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. To facilitate reference in instances where different unions operate in the same broad field, the following general titles are used: Air Line Employees, Civil Servants, Clothing Workers, Electrical Workers, Fish Handlers, Fishermen, Longshoremen, Operating Engineers, Railway Employees, Telephone Employees, and Textile Workers. These general titles appear in alphabetical sequence with the short titles mentioned above. Unions that are listed under any of the general titles are further identified by a specific short title which follows the general title, as, for instance, CLOTHING WORKERS-AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS. In an index at the back of this volume, all unions included in Part I are listed according to the alphabetical order of their full official titles, with page references to the corresponding directory entries.

Labour organizations that consist of a single unit not affiliated with any other labour organization are listed as Independent Local Organizations in Part II of the directory by province and locality. Part III contains information on central labour congresses, their secondary bodies, and directly chartered local unions.

The listings in the directory include all organizations in Canada affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, or the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Unaffiliated organizations are included if a substantial proportion of their membership is in occupations which fall within the scope of the appropriate labour relations legislation, provided that such organizations are party to agreements with two or more employers, or, where they have an agreement with a single employer, the organization is certified as a bargaining agent under the appropriate labour relations act. The coverage of the directory, however, does not extend to independent local organizations having fewer than 50 members. Organizations of policemen, teachers, graduate nurses, and professional engineers are also outside its scope unless they are affiliated with a central labour congress.

No official recognition is implied by the listing of any organization in the directory. The standards for inclusion have been established solely in the interest of consistent statistical practice.

The information presented in this issue has been obtained from survey returns completed in the first months of 1961 by national or international union headquarters, central labour congresses, and independent local organizations active in Canada. Data on the industrial and geographic distribution of union membership, obtained from another survey directed to union locals across the country, will appear at a later date in The Labour Gazette.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1961 was prepared by the Collective Bargaining Section of the Economics and Research Branch, Department of Labour. Much of the credit for its production must be given to the union officers who supplied the required information. To them we express our appreciation.

LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA 1961

At the beginning of 1961 the membership of labour organizations in Canada was approximately 1,447,000, a slight decline from the January 1960 total. Unions affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress accounted for 74 per cent of the organized workers, and approximately 7 per cent of union members belonged to affiliates of another central body, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which until 1960 was known as the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour. The balance of union membership was represented either by organizations independent of a central labour congress or, to a lesser extent, by unions having no congress link in Canada but affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The decision to change the name of the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour to Confederation of National Trade Unions was made by the organization's 39th annual convention held in Montreal from September 25 to October 1, 1960. Along with the new name, the convention adopted a new statement of principles. The new statement, unlike the previous declaration, makes no specific reference to the social doctrine of the Church. It affirms, however, adherence to Christian principles which are to guide the Confederation in its activities.

During 1960 a new organization, the Canadian Union of Operating Engineers, came into existence in southern Ontario. Reporting over 800 members, the new independent union had locals in Toronto, Windsor, and three other centres at the beginning of 1961. Among other developments worthy of note was the expulsion from the Canadian Labour Congress of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, with 40,000 members in Canada, for raiding two other affiliates of the Congress. A motion that the Brotherhood stand expelled within 30 days if it did not abide by the CLC constitution was placed on behalf of the Executive Council before the 3rd CLC convention held in Montreal from April 25 to 29, 1960. The motion was approved by a large majority of the delegates and the expulsion became effective June 1 after the union failed to send a representative to meet with the Council. Earlier in 1960, the Municipal and School Employees' Federation withdrew from the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour. About half of the locals of the Federation, however, chose to remain within the CCCL and during July convened in Shawinigan to form a group named Centrale Professionnelle des Employes des Corporations Municipales et Scolaires. By the end of the year the membership of the new group was close to 4,800, while the independent Federation reported approximately 3,200 members.

The Canadian Labour Congress, over a million strong since its formation in 1956, had in affiliation 107 international and national unions and 220 directly chartered locals in January 1961. The total membership of the Congress, at 1,071,000, was some 52,000 lower than in the previous year. Although during 1960 a number of CLC affiliates, led by the Ladies' Garment Workers, Glass and Ceramic Workers, and Moving Picture Machine Operators, showed membership gains, these were not sufficient to offset the decreases reported by the I.U.E., Auto Workers, Bricklayers, Labourers, Carpenters and other affiliated unions. However, the factor which accounted for most of the net decrease in the membership strength of the Congress was the exclusion from its ranks of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Within the Canadian Labour Congress, organizations belonging also to the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations in the United States continued to make up the largest group. At the beginning of the year, international unions linked with the CLC as well as the AFL-CIO accounted for over 81 per cent of the 1,071,000 members reported by all CLC affiliates.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions had over 98,000 members in 472 locals at the beginning of 1961. In the course of 1960 the total strength of the Confederation declined by about 3,000 as decreases in the ranks of a number of affiliates and the withdrawal of the Municipal and School Employees' Federation outweighed membership gains recorded during the year by other CNTU unions. Of the affiliates that had grown in size, the Service Employees' Federation and the Metal Trades' Federation reported gains exceeding 1,000 members.

The number of Canadian workers belonging to unions affiliated only with the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations remained close to the 34,000 mark, with approximately half of this total represented by the Seafarers, who had held congress affiliation in Canada until 1959.

International unions not affiliated with any central congress in Canada or the United States represented over 116,000 Canadian workers at the beginning of 1961. This total was some 40,000 higher than in the previous year as the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, out of the AFL-CIO since 1957, ceased to be a CLC affiliate as well. Of the balance of organized workers belonging to independent unions, approximately 74,000 were members of unaffiliated national or regional unions, and over 52,000 were reported by the independent local organizations included in the survey.

As in previous years, more than two-thirds of the organized labour force in Canada belonged to unions that operate in the United States as well. In January 1961, 89 of the 108 international unions active in Canada were affiliates of the Canadian Labour Congress, and 85 of these were also within the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Eleven of the remaining 19 international unions had no congress link in Canada, but were affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

National and regional unions operating in Canada at the beginning of the year totalled 50, with 18 unions in this group holding CLC affiliation and 13 belonging to the CNTU.

Taken together, international, national and regional unions had within their ranks close to 1,364,000 workers in a total of 158 organizations ranging in size of their Canadian membership from under ten members to the 82,000 reported by the United Steelworkers of America. The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, with 65,000 members, continued to rank second among unions in Canada, ahead of the 56,000 strong International Union, United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America. Among national unions, the National Union of Public Employees, with 46,000 members, continued to be the largest for the third consecutive year, followed by the 33,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

In 1961 a substantial proportion of Canada's organized labour remained concentrated in a few large unions. The ten largest organizations, with almost half a million members among them, accounted for one out of every three workers in union ranks. In addition to the Steelworkers, Carpenters, and Auto Workers, the ten largest unions included the National Union of Public Employees, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America, the International Association of Machinists, the International Woodworkers of America, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

The grand total of 1,447,000 members reported by labour organizations in the 1961 survey was equal to approximately 32 per cent of the estimated total number of non-agricultural paid workers in Canada.

GLOSSARY

Local — The basic unit of labour organization formed in a particular plant or locality. The members participate directly in the affairs of their local including the election of officers, financial and other business matters, relations between their organization and employers, and they pay dues to the local. There are locals of international, national or regional unions, locals directly chartered by a central congress, and independent local organizations. Sometimes unions have units, similar to locals, such as lodges, branches or divisions.

Local of an International or National Union — A local which is organized by, or elects to affiliate itself with an international or national union. Per capita dues are paid to the parent union and in return certain services are rendered by the union.

Directly Chartered Local — A local which is organized by, and receives its charter from a central labour congress and is not part of an international or national union. It pays per capita dues directly to the congress and receives services from the congress.

Independent Local Organization — A local organization which is not formally connected or affiliated with any other labour organization.

Union — The unit of labour organization which organizes and charters locals in the industries or trades as defined in its constitution, sets general policy for its locals, assists them in the conduct of their affairs, and is the medium for co-ordinating their activities. Funds are obtained from the locals through per capita dues. Unions usually hold regular conventions of delegates from the locals at which general policy is set and at which officers are elected.

International Union — A union which charters locals in the United States and Canada.

National Union — A union which charters locals in Canada only.

Affiliated Union — A union which is affiliated with a central labour congress.

District Council — An organization of locals of a union in a particular area formed to co-ordinate the activities of the locals in the district. District councils may hold meetings of delegates from member locals to deal with matters of interest to them and at which officers for the district are elected. District organizations are also known by such names as joint boards or conference boards.

Allied Trades Federation — An organization of unions or locals of unions in a particular area, functioning in the same industry, to co-ordinate the activities of the members and to deal with jurisdictional questions. Policies are established and officers are elected at meetings attended by delegates from member organizations. Trades federations may be known by other names such as union councils, union federations, joint councils, and they are most frequently found in industries organized along craft lines.

Central Labour Congress — An organization having in affiliation various unions, directly chartered locals, provincial federations of labour, and local labour councils, for the purpose of broadly co-ordinating their activities at the national level including the relations between unions and governments and establishing relations with organized workers internationally. Congresses hold annual or biennial conventions attended by delegates from affiliated organizations at which policies are established and officers elected. The congress also organizes local unions known as directly chartered locals. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on all affiliates.

Provincial Federation — An organization formed by a labour congress at the provincial level which consists of the congress affiliates in the province. It functions similarly to the congress in the appropriate provincial area except that it does not charter local unions. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

Local Labour Council — An organization formed by a labour congress at the city level. It is organized and functions in the same manner as a provincial federation but within the scope of a city. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

CONGRESSES

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

The Canadian Labour Congress was formed in May 1956 by the merger of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labour.

At the beginning of 1961, the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 89 international unions, 18 national and regional unions and 220 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 1,070,837 in a total of 5,650 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 9 provincial federations and 101 local labour councils.

Conventions of the CLC are held in the spring of every second year. The most recent convention was in Montreal, Que., in 1960. The next convention is to be held in Vancouver, B.C., in April 1962.

Headquarters of the Congress are located at 100 Argyle Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario.

CONFEDERATION OF NATIONAL TRADE UNIONS

The Confederation of National Trade Unions (formerly known as the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour) was established in 1921 at a founding convention in Hull, Que., attended by delegates representing 89 Canadian Catholic unions.

At the beginning of 1961, the Confederation of National Trade Unions had in affiliation 12 federations, one central union and 59 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 98,457 in a total of 472 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 16 local labour councils.

Following 1960, conventions of the CNTU are to be held biennially, with the next regular convention scheduled for 1962. A special convention is to be held before December 31, 1961, to study a new constitution and matters concerning internal administration.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS

Since 1949, when the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) was established, the labour movement has been organized on a world-wide scale into three central bodies which, in addition to the ICFTU, include the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (IFCTU) and the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU). The IFCTU, of which the CNTU is the Canadian affiliate, was founded at The Hague in 1920 by representatives of Catholic and Protestant federations mostly from European countries. The World Federation of Trade Unions, founded in 1945, was confronted four years later with irreconcilable ideological differences which resulted in the withdrawal of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Canadian Congress of Labour, the British Trades Union Congress and many other national trade union organizations, and left the WFTU with membership reduced mainly to the USSR and Soviet bloc countries. In December 1949 labour representatives from 53 countries, including Canadian delegates from both the TLC and CCL, assembled in London, England to establish the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Canadian affiliation, which began with the founding convention, has been retained by the CLC since the 1956 merger of the TLC and CCL.

International Confederation of Free Trade Unions

In December 1960 the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was composed of 135 affiliates in 107 countries and territories in North, Central and South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australasia. The total membership was approximately 57,000,000. The headquarters of the ICFTU are located at 24 rue du Lombard, Brussels, Belgium.

International Trade Secretariats

The International Trade Secretariats (ITS) listed below are independent federations composed of national unions from different countries throughout the world, with each secretariat organized according to specific or related trades or industries. Completely autonomous bodies, the ITS act independently on questions concerning their specialized interests. However, they usually adopt the general policies of the ICFTU, and are closely associated with it.

European Union of Film and Television Technicians
International Federation of Building and Woodworkers
International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees
International Federation of Free Teachers' Unions
International Federation of Industrial Organizations and General Workers' Unions
International Federation of Petroleum Workers
International Federation of Plantation, Agricultural and Allied Workers
International Graphical Federation
International Metal Workers' Federation
International Shoe and Leather Workers' Federation
International Textile and Garment Workers' Federation
International Transport Workers' Federation
International Union of Food, Drink and Tobacco Workers' Associations
International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers
Miners' International Federation
Postal, Telegraph and Telephone International Public Services International
Universal Alliance of Diamond Workers

International Federation of Christian Trade Unions

In 1961 the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions was composed of 56 affiliates in 47 countries and territories in North, Central and South America, Europe, Asia and Africa. The total membership was approximately 6,000,000. The headquarters of the IFCTU are located at 148 rue de la Loi, Brussels, Belgium.

FOREWORD

Factual information on labour organizations falls within the wide range of data that help to form perspective on the nation's social and economic development. To provide a concise reference source on the union movement, the Department of Labour has published since 1911 an annual handbook dealing with the structure, size and leadership of labour organizations active in Canada.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1962 is the fifty-first edition in the annual series. Following the pattern established over the years, the 1962 edition contains a brief commentary, the latest statistical data on union membership, and a directory of labour organizations with names of their principal officers and publications, and the geographic distribution of their local branches in Canada.

The entries in the directory are arranged in three parts. Part I bears the heading International and National Unions and contains a listing of all organizations affiliated with a central labour congress (other than directly chartered locals), and unaffiliated organizations consisting of at least two locals or similar units. With some exceptions, the unions included in this part are listed in alphabetical order of their short titles consisting of a key word or words in the full official title of the union, as, for instance, STEELWORKERS in the United Steelworkers of America, or PRINTING PRESSMEN in International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. To facilitate reference in instances where different unions operate in the same broad field, the following general titles are used:

Air Line Employees	Operating Engineers
Civil Servants	Plant Guards
Clothing Workers	Railway Employees
Electrical Workers	Shoe Workers
Fish Handlers	Telephone Employees
Fishermen	Textile Workers
Longshoremen

These general titles appear in alphabetical sequence with the short titles mentioned above. Unions that are listed under any of the general titles are further identified by a specific short title which follows the general title, as, for instance, CLOTHING WORKERS—AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS. In an index at the back of this volume, all unions included in Part I are listed according to the alphabetical order of their full official titles, with page references to the corresponding directory entries.

Labour organizations that consist of a single unit not affiliated with any other labour organization are listed as Independent Local Organizations in Part II of the directory by province and locality. Part III contains information on central labour congresses, their secondary bodies, and directly chartered local unions.

The listings in the directory include all organizations in Canada affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, or the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Unaffiliated organizations are included if a substantial proportion of their membership is in occupations which fall within the scope of the appropriate labour relations legislation, provided that such organizations are party to agreements with two or more employers, or, where they have an agreement with a single employer, the organization is certified as a bargaining agent under the appropriate labour relations act. The coverage of the directory, however, does not extend to independent local organizations having fewer than 50 members. Organizations of policemen, teachers, graduate nurses, and professional engineers are also outside its scope unless they are affiliated with a central labour congress.

No official recognition is implied by the listing of any organization in the directory. The standards for inclusion have been established solely in the interest of consistent statistical practice.

The information presented in this issue has been obtained from survey returns completed in the first months of 1962 by national or international union headquarters, central labour congresses, and independent local organizations active in Canada. Data on the industrial and geographic distribution of union membership, obtained from another survey directed to union locals across the country, will appear at a later date in The Labour Gazette.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1962 was prepared by the Collective Bargaining Section of the Economics and Research Branch, Department of Labour. Much of the credit for its production must be given to the union officers who supplied the required information. To them we express our appreciation.

LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA 1962

Labour organizations active in Canada at the beginning of 1962 reported membership totalling 1,423,000. Almost 74 per cent of the organized workers were represented by unions affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress. Of the unions within the CLC, a large group belonged also to the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations in the United States. Approximately 7 per cent of union members, nearly all of them in the province of Quebec, were in affiliates of another central body, the Confederation of National Trade Unions. The balance of union membership was represented either by organizations independent of a central labour congress, or by unions not affiliated with a central labour body in Canada but linked with the AFL-CIO.

The 1962 membership total of 1,423,000 was approximately 24,000 less than in the previous year. Much of the decrease was accounted for by the dissolution of the Newfoundland Brotherhood of Woods Workers, which had reported nearly 15,000 members before it went out of existence in October 1961. This independent organization was formed in 1959 after a prolonged logging strike and passage of legislation revoking the bargaining rights of two locals of the International Woodworkers of America.

Also no longer active in 1962 were the Canadian branches of two international unions, the Flight Engineers' International Association and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which between them had some 150 members in Canada until last year. The Flight Engineers' International Association discontinued activities in Canada following the introduction of new aircraft not requiring flight engineers. The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees withdrew from Canada when its only Canadian local was transferred by agreement to the National Union of Public Service Employees.

At its latest convention, the International Union, United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, widely known as the U.A.W., substituted the word "Aerospace" for "Aircraft" in its full title. Partial changes in name were also adopted recently by the International Molders' and Foundry Workers' Union of North America, which is now known as the International Molders' and Allied Workers' Union; by the Saskatchewan Civil Service Association, which has become the Saskatchewan Government Employees' Association; and by the Union Catholique des Cultivateurs, whose logging division is now called Section des Bûcherons instead of Service Forestier. A change in name was also reported by the United Packinghouse Workers of America; this union is now called the United Packinghouse, Food and Allied Workers, thus giving recognition in its title to its locals outside the meat packing industry.

In June 1961 the Canadian District of the Seafarers' International Union of North America amended its constitution to become the Seafarers' International Union of Canada. This union retained its affiliation with the former parent organization, the Seafarers' International Union of North America, and also with the AFL-CIO.

At the beginning of 1962 the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 106 international and national unions and 192 directly chartered locals. The total membership represented by the CLC, at 1,049,000, was approximately 22,000 down from the previous year. Although a number of CLC affiliates showed membership gains in 1961, these were not sufficient to offset the decreases reported by the Carpenters, the Labourers, the B.C. Government Employees, and other unions within the Congress. The drop in the overall membership strength of the CLC reflected also the loss of two affiliates—the Amalgamated Lithographers of America and the Saskatchewan Civil Service Association—which in 1961 had nearly 10,000 members between them. The Lithographers withdrew from the CLC in May 1961, following a jurisdictional conflict involving the established bargaining rights of another affiliate, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. Charged with raiding, the Lithographers explained in their notice of disaffiliation that they considered it vital to the continued existence of their union to organize all lithographic workers on a craft basis wherever they are employed. The Executive Council of the CLC, however, found the Lithographers in violation of the CLC constitution and announced their suspension from membership in the Congress. The Saskatchewan Civil Service Association disaffiliated from the CLC at the end of September as a result of differences over the application of an existing agreement with respect to organizing jurisdiction.

Within the Canadian Labour Congress, international unions continued to make up the largest group, representing more than 83 per cent of the CLC membership strength. Nearly all of the international affiliates of the CLC belonged also to the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. In August 1961 the American Federation of Technical Engineers resumed affiliation with the CLC. An international union and AFL-CIO affiliate, the American Federation of Technical Engineers had been without a congress link in Canada since 1958.

National unions within the Canadian Labour Congress accounted for approximately 15 per cent of the Congress membership, while the remainder, amounting to 2 per cent of the total, was in local unions directly chartered by the Congress. During 1961 about 20 directly chartered locals with 3,500 members were transferred to the Packinghouse Workers, the Steelworkers, and other CLC affiliates, bringing to 175 the number of such transfers since the Congress was established in 1956.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions, whose membership a year earlier was about 1,500 short of the 100,000 mark, had more than 102,000 members in its affiliates at the beginning of 1962. Although some of the federations within the CNTU reported lower membership totals, others showed advances that were substantial enough to produce a net gain for the Confederation as a whole. Of the affiliates that had grown in size, the Service Employees' Federation reported the largest gain amounting to more than 3,000 members. In September 1961 the CNTU held a special convention which concerned itself in large measure with matters of internal administration. Among the major steps taken was the decision to work toward an amalgamation of the existing 13 federations into six larger ones, and to establish regional offices throughout the province of Quebec.

Of the 1,423,000 union members in Canada reported in the 1962 survey, more than a million were in international unions, which have branches both in Canada and the United States and in most cases belong to central labour bodies in both countries. In January 1962, 85 of the 108 international unions active in Canada were affiliated with the CLC as well as the AFL-CIO, 10 belonged only to the AFL-CIO, and 3 to the CLC. The remaining 10 international unions, with 118,000 members in total, had no affiliation. Over 40,000 of the union members in the unaffiliated group belonged to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which had been in the AFL-CIO until 1958 and the CLC until 1960.

In the course of 1961 the United Shoe Workers of America became active in Canada. A long-established organization in the United States, the United Shoe Workers extended operations into Canada with the formation of a local in London, Ontario.

Canadian workers belonging to national unions numbered 335,000 at the beginning of 1962. Of this total, shared by 51 unions, 156,000 were members of 18 national unions affiliated with the CLC, and 96,000 belonged to the 13 federations within the CNTU. The remaining 20 unions, with 83,000 members in total, were without affiliation. In October 1961 a new national union was formed with the assistance of the CLC. Established to represent seamen, the new organization, called the Canadian Maritime Union, had secured bargaining rights for approximately 500 crew members on Great Lakes ships by the end of March 1962.

Taken together, international and national unions had nearly 1,360,000 members within their ranks in a total of 159 organizations ranging in size of their Canadian membership from under 10 members to the 82,000 reported by the United Steelworkers of America. The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, with 59,000 members, remained second in size, closely followed by the 57,000 strong International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America. Among national unions, the National Union of Public Employees, with nearly 50,000 members, continued to rank first for the fourth consecutive year, ahead of the 34,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

Outside international and national unions, about 26,000 workers were organized in 243 separate locals chartered by the two Canadian central bodies, the CLC and the CNTU, and another 37,000 belonged to the 126 independent local organizations coming with the scope of the annual survey.

In 1962, as in previous years, a substantial proportion of Canada's organized labour remained concentrated in a few large unions. The ten largest organizations, with almost half a million members among them, accounted for one out of every three workers in union ranks. In addition to the Steelworkers, Carpenters, and Auto Workers, the ten largest unions included, in descending order, the National Union of Public Employees, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America, the International Association of Machinists, the International Woodworkers of America, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

The grand total of 1,423,000 members reported by labour organizations in 1962 was equal to approximately 30 per cent of the estimated total number of non-agricultural paid workers in Canada.

GLOSSARY

Local — The basic unit of labour organization formed in a particular plant or locality. The members participate directly in the affairs of their local including the election of officers, financial and other business matters, relations between their organization and employers, and they pay dues to the local. There are locals of international, national or regional unions, locals directly chartered by a central congress, and independent local organizations. Sometimes unions have units, similar to locals, such as lodges, branches or divisions.

Local of an International or National Union — A local which is organized by, or elects to affiliate itself with an international or national union. Per capita dues are paid to the parent union and in return certain services are rendered by the union.

Directly Chartered Local — A local which is organized by, and receives its charter from a central labour congress and is not part of an international or national union. It pays per capita dues directly to the congress and receives services from the congress.

Independent Local Organization — A local organization which is not formally connected or affiliated with any other labour organization.

Union — The unit of labour organization which organizes and charters locals in the industries or trades as defined in its constitution, sets general policy for its locals, assists them in the conduct of their affairs, and is the medium for co-ordinating their activities. Funds are obtained from the locals through per capita dues. Unions usually hold regular conventions of delegates from the locals at which general policy is set and at which officers are elected.

International Union — A union which charters locals in the United States and Canada.

National Union — A union which charters locals in Canada only.

Affiliated Union — A union which is affiliated with a central labour congress.

District Council — An organization of locals of a union in a particular area formed to co-ordinate the activities of the locals in the district. District councils may hold meetings of delegates from member locals to deal with matters of interest to them and at which officers for the district are elected. District organizations are also known by such names as joint boards or conference boards.

Allied Trades Federation — An organization of unions or locals of unions in a particular area, functioning in the same industry, to co-ordinate the activities of the members and to deal with jurisdictional questions. Policies are established and officers are elected at meetings attended by delegates from member organizations. Trades federations may be known by other names such as union councils, union federations, joint councils, and they are most frequently found in industries organized along craft lines.

Central Labour Congress — An organization having in affiliation various unions, directly chartered locals, provincial federations of labour, and local labour councils, for the purpose of broadly co-ordinating their activities at the national level including the relations between unions and governments and establishing relations with organized workers internationally. Congresses hold annual or biennial conventions attended by delegates from affiliated organizations at which policies are established and officers elected. The congress also organizes local unions known as directly chartered locals. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on all affiliates.

Provincial Federation — An organization formed by a labour congress at the provincial level which consists of the congress affiliates in the province. It functions similarly to the congress in the appropriate provincial area except that it does not charter local unions. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

Local Labour Council — An organization formed by a labour congress at the city level. It is organized and functions in the same manner as a provincial federation but within the scope of a city. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

CONGRESSES

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

The Canadian Labour Congress was formed in May 1956 by the merger of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labour.

At the beginning of 1962, the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 88 international unions, 18 national unions and 192 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 1,049,395 in a total of 5,652 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 9 provincial federations and 100 local labour councils.

Conventions of the CLC are held in the spring of every second year. The most recent convention was in Vancouver, B.C., in 1962. The next convention is to be held in Montreal, Que., in April 1964.

Headquarters of the Congress are located at 100 Argyle Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario.

CONFEDERATION OF NATIONAL TRADE UNIONS

The Confederation of National Trade Unions (formerly known as the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour) was established in 1921 at a founding convention in Hull, Que., attended by delegates representing 89 Canadian Catholic unions.

At the beginning of 1962, the Confederation of National Trade Unions had in affiliation 12 federations, one central union and 51 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 102,186 in a total of 483 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 16 local labour councils.

Following 1960, conventions of the CNTU are to be held biennially, with the next regular convention scheduled for 1962. A special convention was held in September 1961, to study a reorganization of the services and structure of the CNTU.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS

Since 1949, when the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) was established, the labour movement has been organized on a world-wide scale into three central bodies which, in addition to the ICFTU, include the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (IFCTU) and the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU). The IFCTU, of which the CNTU is the Canadian affiliate, was founded at The Hague in 1920 by representatives of Catholic and Protestant federations mostly from European countries. The World Federation of Trade Unions, founded in 1945, was confronted four years later with irreconcilable ideological differences which resulted in the withdrawal of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Canadian Congress of Labour, the British Trades Union Congress and many other national trade union organizations, and left the WFTU with membership reduced mainly to the USSR and Soviet bloc countries. In December 1949 labour representatives from 53 countries, including Canadian delegates from both the TLC and CCL, assembled in London, England to establish the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Canadian affiliation, which began with the founding convention, has been retained by the CLC since the 1956 merger of the TLC and CCL.

International Confederation of Free Trade Unions

In January 1962 the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was composed of 137 affiliates in 106 countries and territories in North, Central and South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australasia. The total membership was approximately 57,000,000. The headquarters of the ICFTU are located at 24 rue du Lombard, Brussels, Belgium.

President Arne Geijer (Sweden)

General Secretary Omer Beçu (Belgium)

Canadian Members of

Executive Board Claude Jodoin (Substitutes: W. Mahoney, K. Kaplansky)
Donald MacDonald (Substitute: J. Morris)

International Trade Secretariats

The International Trade Secretariats (ITS) listed below are independent federations composed of national unions from different countries throughout the world, with each secretariat organized according to specific or related trades or industries. Completely autonomous bodies, the ITS act independently on questions concerning their specialized interests. However, they adopt the general policies of the ICFTU, and are closely associated with it.

Information on labour organizations falls within the wide range of data that help to form perspective on the nation's social and economic development. To provide a concise reference source on the union movement, the Department of Labour has published since 1911 an annual handbook dealing with the structure, size and leadership of labour organizations active in Canada.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1963 is the fifty-second edition in the annual series. Following the pattern established over the years, the 1963 edition contains a brief commentary, the latest statistical data on union membership, and a directory of labour organizations with names of their principal officers and publications, and the geographic distribution of their local branches in Canada.

The entries in the directory are arranged in three parts. Part I bears the heading International and National Unions and contains a listing of all organizations affiliated with a central labour congress (other than directly chartered locals), and unaffiliated organizations consisting of at least two locals or similar units. With some exceptions, the unions included in this part are listed in alphabetical order of their short titles consisting of a key word or words in the full official title of the union, as, for instance, STEELWORKERS in the United Steelworkers of America, or PRINTING PRESSMEN in International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. To facilitate reference in instances where different unions operate in the same broad field, the following general titles are used:

Air Line Employees	Operating Engineers
Civil Servants	Plant Guards
Clothing Workers	Railway Employees
Electrical Workers	Shoe Workers
Fish Handlers	Telephone Employees
Fishermen	Textile Workers
Longshoremen

These general titles appear in alphabetical sequence with the short titles mentioned above. Unions that are listed under any of the general titles are further identified by a specific short title which follows the general title, as, for instance, CLOTHING WORKERS—AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS. In an index at the back of this volume, all unions included in Part I are listed according to the alphabetical order of their full official titles, with page references to the corresponding directory entries.

Labour organizations that consist of a single unit not affiliated with any other labour organization are listed as Independent Local Organizations in Part II of the directory by province and locality. Part III contains information on central labour congresses, their secondary bodies, and directly chartered local unions.

The listings in the directory include all organizations in Canada affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, or the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Unaffiliated organizations are included if a substantial proportion of their membership is in occupations which fall within the scope of the appropriate labour relations legislation, provided that such organizations are party to agreements with two or more employers, or, where they have an agreement with a single employer, the organization is certified as a bargaining agent under the appropriate labour relations act. The coverage of the directory, however, does not extend to independent local organizations having fewer than 50 members. Organizations of policemen, teachers, graduate nurses, and professional engineers are also outside its scope unless they are affiliated with a central labour congress.

No official recognition is implied by the listing of any organization in the directory. The standards for inclusion have been established solely in the interest of consistent statistical practice.

The information presented in this issue has been obtained from survey returns completed in the first months of 1963 by national or international union headquarters, central labour congresses, and independent local organizations active in Canada. Data on the industrial and geographic distribution of union membership, obtained from another survey directed to union locals across the country, will appear at a later date in The Labour Gazette.

Labour Organizations in Canada 1963 was prepared by the Collective Bargaining Section of the Economics and Research Branch, Department of Labour. Much of the credit for its production must be given to the union officers who supplied the required information. To them we express our appreciation.

LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA 1963

A total of 1,449,200 workers belonged to labour organizations active in Canada at the beginning of 1963; this represents an increase of almost two per cent over the previous year's membership. Seventy-five per cent of the organized workers were members of unions affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress. Of the unions within the CLC, a major group belonged also to the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO) in the United States. Another eight per cent of union membership in Canada was in unions affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions, while 16 per cent of the total was represented by unaffiliated international, national or local unions. About two per cent of the total union membership in Canada belonged to unions having no affiliation with a central labour body in Canada but linked with the AFL-CIO.

The 1963 union membership total represents a net increase of 26,000 during the past year. Sixteen unions operating in Canada reported increases of 1,000 members or more. The Steelworkers, with an increase of 8,000, recorded the largest increase for any single union; another substantial gain in membership (4,300) was reported by the Auto Workers. A number of unions experienced a falling-off in membership during the year. The 1963 membership of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers was down by 8,000 from 1962, the Teamster's membership was smaller by 3,500 and the Seafarers reported 2,400 fewer members than in the previous year. Six other unions experienced decreases of 1,000 or more members during the year.

Included in this edition are two international unions which have recently extended their activities into Canada. The International Union of Doll and Toy Workers of the United States and Canada, an AFL-CIO affiliate, reported membership among the employees of several doll and toy factories in Ontario. In 1962 this union also became an affiliate of the CLC. Another AFL-CIO affiliate, the International Union of Journeymen Horseshoers of the United States and Canada was also reported active in Canada. This union, which was organized in the United States in April 1874, had Canadian membership up to 1918; it now makes its reappearance in these pages after an absence of 45 years.

During 1962 the Association of Radio and Television Employees of Canada, commonly known as A.R.T.E.C., merged its 12 locals with the National Union of Public Service Employees and became a national division of N.U.P.S.E. The 12 A.R.T.E.C. locals had a total of 1,900 members.

Several changes in the names of unions were recorded in 1962. Effective October 1, the name of the Stove Mounters' International Union of North America (AFL-CIO) was changed to Stove, Furnace and Allied Appliance Workers' International Union of North America. In June 1962, the Centrale Professionnelle des Employés des Corporations Municipales et Scolaires (CNTU), which had been formed in July 1960, changed its name to Fédération des Employés des Services Publics. In July 1962, another union, the former Fédération Nationale Catholique des Employés du Commerce (CNTU) changed its name to Centrale Professionnelle des Employés du Commerce et de Bureau.

In January 1963, the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 108 international and national unions, as well as 181 directly chartered local unions. These represented a total membership of 1,079,900, an increase of 30,800 over 1962. Over two-thirds of this increase was accounted for by international affiliates, notably the Steelworkers, and the Auto Workers mentioned earlier. The remainder of the increase represented gains reported by national unions and directly chartered locals. While some unions within the CLC reported drops in membership, these were more than offset by the increases reported by other affiliates.

Of the national unions within the CLC, both the National Union of Public Employees and the National Union of Public Service Employees, recorded increases of 3,000 over their 1962 membership.

During 1962 the Coopers' International Union of North America with about 100 members in Canada, entered into affiliation with the CLC. Active in Canada prior to 1911 when its two locals surrendered their charters, and resuming activities in Canada in 1936, the Coopers' union has long been affiliated with the AFL-CIO but had remained without a congress link in Canada until last year.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions with a membership of 110,600 in 13 federations and 51 directly chartered locals showed an increase of 8,400 members; this was accounted for largely by the 3,200-member increases reported by both the Public Service Employees' Federation (Fédération des Employés des Services Publics) and the Service Employees' Federation (Fédération Nationale Catholique des Services, Inc.). In December 1962 the CNTU extended its activities to Newfoundland when the St. Lawrence Workers' Protective Union, an independent local organization, was granted membership in the Metal Trades' Federation of the CNTU.

Of the 1,449,200 union members reported in the 1963 survey, 1,031,700 belonged to international unions which have branches both in Canada and the United States, and in most cases belong to central labour bodies in both countries. Of the 110 international unions active in Canada in January 1963, 87 unions with 882,200 members were affiliated with the CLC and the AFL-CIO; three unions with 12,600 members were affiliated with the CLC only, and 10 unions with 30,500 members were affiliated only with the AFL-CIO. The remaining 10 international unions, accounting for some 106,300 members, were without any affiliation.

National unions active in Canada numbered 51, with 350,900 members at January 1963. Affiliated with the CLC were 18 of these unions, with 163,200 members, while the 13 federations within the Confederation of National Trade Unions had a membership of 104,500. The remaining 20 national unions with a combined membership of 83,200 were without affiliation.

International and national unions had almost 1,382,600 members in a total of 161 unions at the beginning of 1963. The Canadian membership in these unions ranged in size from less than 10 members to the 90,000 members reported by the United Steelworkers of America. The following, listed in order of size, were the ten largest unions in Canada, based on 1963 membership. The bracketed figures denote the relative position of these unions in the previous year.

1. United Steelworkers of America (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(1)	90,000
2. International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(3)	61,100
3. United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(2)	60,200
4. National Union of Public Employees (CLC)	(4)	52,900
5. International Association of Machinists (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(6)	40,400
6. International Woodworkers of America (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(7)	37,900
7. International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America (Ind.)	(5)	37,300
8. International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(9)	36,600
9. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL-CIO/CLC)	(8)	35,500
10. Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC)	(10)	35,200

These ten largest unions, with almost a half million members among them, accounted for more than one out of three workers in union ranks in Canada in 1963.

Outside the international and national unions, about 28,000 workers in Canada were organized in 232 separate locals chartered directly either by the Canadian Labour Congress or the Confederation of National Trade Unions, and another 38,700 belonged to the 128 independent local organizations coming within the scope of the annual survey.

The grand total of 1,449,200 members reported by labour organizations in 1963 was equal to about 30 per cent of the estimated total number of non-agricultural paid workers in Canada.

(b) Data on union membership for all years up to and including 1949 are as of December 31. In 1950 the reference date was moved ahead by one day to January 1, 1951. Thus, while no figure is shown for 1950, the annual series is, in effect, continued without interruption. The data on union membership for subsequent years are also as of January.

(c) Figures for all years up to and including 1952 are as of the first week in June. Data for subsequent years are as of January.

(d) An adjustment in coverage resulted in a net addition of approximately 23,000 members.

GLOSSARY

Local — The basic unit of labour organization formed in a particular plant or locality. The members participate directly in the affairs of their local including the election of officers, financial and other business matters, relations between their organization and employers, and they pay dues to the local. There are locals of international, national or regional unions, locals directly chartered by a central congress, and independent local organizations. Sometimes unions have units, similar to locals, such as lodges, branches or divisions.

Local of an International or National Union — A local which is organized by, or elects to affiliate itself with an international or national union. Per capita dues are paid to the parent union and in return certain services are rendered by the union.

Directly Chartered Local — A local which is organized by, and receives its charter from a central labour congress and is not part of an international or national union. It pays per capita dues directly to the congress and receives services from the congress.

Independent Local Organization — A local organization which is not formally connected or affiliated with any other labour organization.

Union — The unit of labour organization which organizes and charters locals in the industries or trades as defined in its constitution, sets general policy for its locals, assists them in the conduct of their affairs, and is the medium for co-ordinating their activities. Funds are obtained from the locals through per capita dues. Unions usually hold regular conventions of delegates from the locals at which general policy is set and at which officers are elected.

International Union — A union which charters locals in the United States and Canada.

National Union — A union which charters locals in Canada only.

Affiliated Union — A union which is affiliated with a central labour congress.

District Council — An organization of locals of a union in a particular area formed to co-ordinate the activities of the locals in the district. District councils may hold meetings of delegates from member locals to deal with matters of interest to them and at which officers for the district are elected. District organizations are also known by such names as joint boards or conference boards.

Allied Trades Federation — An organization of unions or locals of unions in a particular area, functioning in the same industry, to co-ordinate the activities of the members and to deal with jurisdictional questions. Policies are established and officers are elected at meetings attended by delegates from member organizations. Trades federations may be known by other names such as union councils, union federations, joint councils, and they are most frequently found in industries organized along craft lines.

Central Labour Congress — An organization having in affiliation various unions, directly chartered locals, provincial federations of labour, and local labour councils, for the purpose of broadly co-ordinating their activities at the national level including the relations between unions and governments and establishing relations with organized workers internationally. Congresses hold annual or biennial conventions attended by delegates from affiliated organizations at which policies are established and officers elected. The congress also organizes local unions known as directly chartered locals. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on all affiliates.

Provincial Federation — An organization formed by a labour congress at the provincial level which consists of the congress affiliates in the province. It functions similarly to the congress in the appropriate provincial area except that it does not charter local unions. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

Local Labour Council — An organization formed by a labour congress at the city level. It is organized and functions in the same manner as a provincial federation but within the scope of a city. Funds are obtained through a per capita tax on affiliates.

PART III

CONGRESSES

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

The Canadian Labour Congress was formed in May 1956 by the merger of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labour.

At the beginning of 1963, the Canadian Labour Congress had in affiliation 90 international unions, 18 national unions and 181 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 1,079,909 in a total of 5,696 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 9 provincial federations and 106 local labour councils.

Conventions of the CLC are held in the spring of every second year. The most recent convention was in Vancouver, B.C., in 1962. The next convention is to be held in Montreal, Que., in April 1964.

Headquarters of the Congress are located at 100 Argyle Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario.

CONFEDERATION OF NATIONAL TRADE UNIONS

The Confederation of National Trade Unions (formerly known as the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labour) was established in 1921 at a founding convention in Hull, Que., attended by delegates representing 89 Canadian Catholic unions.

At the beginning of 1963, the Confederation of National Trade Unions had in affiliation 12 federations, one central union and 51 directly chartered local unions. Combined membership of all affiliates numbered 110,577 in a total of 541 locals. Affiliated secondary bodies included 16 local labour councils.

Following 1960, conventions of the CNTU are to be held biennially, with the next regular convention scheduled for 1964. A special convention was held in September 1961, to study a reorganization of the services and structure of the CNTU.

Headquarters of the CNTU are located at 1001 St. Denis St., Montreal 18, Que.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS

Since 1949, when the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) was established, the labour movement has been organized on a world-wide scale into three central bodies which, in addition to the ICFTU, include the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (IFCTU) and the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU). The IFCTU, of which the CNTU is the Canadian affiliate, was founded at The Hague in 1920 by representatives of Catholic and Protestant federations mostly from European countries. The World Federation of Trade Unions, founded in 1945, was confronted four years later with irreconcilable ideological differences which resulted in the withdrawal of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Canadian Congress of Labour, the British Trades Union Congress and many other national trade union organizations, and left the WFTU with membership reduced mainly to the USSR and Soviet bloc countries. In December 1949 labour representatives from 53 countries, including Canadian delegates from both the TLC and CCL, assembled in London, England to establish the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Canadian affiliation, which began with the founding convention, has been retained by the CLC since the 1956 merger of the TLC and CCL.

International Confederation of Free Trade Unions

In April 1963 the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was composed of 141 affiliates in 108 countries and territories in North, Central and South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australasia. The total membership was approximately 57,000,000. The headquarters of the ICFTU are located at 37-47 rue Montagne aux Herbes Potagères, Brussels, Belgium.
